FROM THE BALANCE.

No. I.

A comparative view of the disadvantages and benefits, which would probably accrue to the United States, from an enlargement of their territorial limits by the purchase of either
LOUISIANA OR THE FLORIDAS.

LOUISIANA is a vast tract of land, West of the Mississippi; and is bounded East by that river, South by the gulph of Mexico, West by New Mexico; and to the North it stretches to an indefinite extent, as its boundaries in that direction are unknown. Mr. Livingston's memorial describes it to be an insalubrious marshy country, in a burning climate. This description is supposed, however, to have a particular reference to the Southern parts of Louisiana; which are exposed to the heat of an intensely scorching sun, and are so marshy and unhealthy, especially at & near the gulph of Mexico, as to be uninhabitable. Opposite to the Natchez (a district belonging to the United States, and lying at the distance of about three hundred and fifty miles from the mouth of the Missippi) the soil of Louisiana is declared to be fertile, and its climate pleasant and salubrious. In the narrative of Capt. Isaac Stewart, who, led captive by the Indians, had traversed that wilderness, the air is represented to be pure and serene, the climate healthy, and the soil exceeding rich, on the banks of the river Missouri; which empties into the Mississippi, one hundred and ninety five miles above the mouth of the Ohio, and eleven hundred and sixty miles North of the gulph of Mexico.

Louisiana is mostly a forest: the greater part of its white inhabitants are Roman catholics, of French and Spanish extraction; but neither their number, nor that of the negroes whom they hold in bondage, is known. The metropolis of Louisiana is New Orleans, which is situated on the East bank of the Mississippi, one hundred and five miles from its mouth.

"The Floridas (according to Mr. Livingston's description) are a narrow strip of barren land," Lying East of the Mississippi, they extend in length about one thousand miles; and in no part are more than a hundred and fifty miles wide.—They are situated South of Georgia; and are bounded by that State, by the Atlantic Ocean and by the gulph of Mexico; and Westerly they border on the Mississippi, from its mouth to the Georgia line. The principal town in West Florida is Pensacola; in East Florida, St. Augustine.—The inhabitants are masters and slaves.

The river Mississippi, together with its Eastern branches, (as Doctor Morse says, in his Universal Geography,) waters five-eights of the United States. That noble river being the only road to market for a vast and fertile country, whose inhabitants are rapidly increasing; its free navigation is of primary importance to this nation: and almost equally important and necessary is it that the people of the States, passing down the river, should have some convenient and established place where to unlade and deposit their cargoes. In the year 1796, Spain, by a solemn treaty, stipulated that New Orleans should be open and free for the people of the United States, as a place of deposit. In 1802, Louisiana was ceded by Spain to France; and the Spaniards, after this cession, and while still holding possession of New Orleans, denied to the people of the States the privileges of deposit, which they had sacredly pledged. The treaty having been thus violated, on the part of Spain, many thought the national honour required that the perfidy and insult should be resented and punished; and that New Orleans ought to be wrested from the hands of its perfidious posesssors. The administration pursued an opposite course. Mr. Monroe, furnished with two millions of dollars, was dispatched to France to open a negotiation. Previous to his arrival, Mr. Livingston, resident in France, favoured by a most fortunate concurrence of circumstances, had already presented his memorial to the first consul, and was negociating for the purchase of Louisiana; which purchase was finally made, for the sum (if we have it correct) of fifteen million and about a quarter of a million of dollars. Report says, that Mr. Monroe has repaired to Madrid, to negociate with the Spaniards an exchange of Louisiana, or some part of it for the Floridas.

This is a concise history of the subject; and in this authentic shape it comes before the public. It is a subject of vast importance, and applies to the interest and bosom of the whole nation. In the ensuing discussions, it shall be canvassed coolly and candidly, on the grounds of its own merits, and without any irritating appeals to party feelings. Should the writer's remarks prove incorrect, or his arguments be found to be inconclusive, he will readily acknowledge his obligations to any one, who, in a decent manner, shall point out the errors of his principles or the fallacies of his reasonings: If on the other hand, his observations and arguments should be correct and weighty, it is hoped that even those of the opposite party, who makes truth the object of their enquiries, will not fastidiously reject them; but that they will give them their due weight, tho' they are ushered into public view from a federal press.

CALCULATOR.

[We recommend to the marked attention of the reader the parallel which Mentor has so concisely and yet so clearly drawn between the national justice and faith of England and France, as far as respects their transactions with our citizens and government. Of the immense amount of the St. Domingo bills, which the first consul has seen proper to protest, with the greatest reflection upon the drawers and possessors, we had no conception. The mode which Mentor points out for redress, is perhaps the only one which can promise the least success, and it is to be hoped will be adopted by the sufferers.]
Balt. Fed. Gaz.

I AM much pleased to find that our commissioners in London have completed the object of their mission, with honor to themselves and so much to the satisfaction of those whose claims were the subject of their consideration. How truly just and worthy of praise has been the conduct of the American and British governments on this occasion: to settle by cool and deliberate investigation the claims of individuals of each country, and when established to discharge them with good faith and integrity.

With such an immense navy as Great Britain possesses, commanded by men of various descriptions and habits, and spread all over the globe, without the view and almost beyond the controul of their government, it is no matter of astonishment if some needy and unprincipled men should sometimes be employed, and commit acts of unjustifiable depredations on others; but it is certainly just and honorable if the government make reparation for these injuries when they are known and established. Let us contrast this conduct of the British with that of the French government, and how different is the treatment that we have received from the latter!

The French not only treated our ambassadors with contempt, but refused to enter into any treaty unless all claims for spoliation were abandoned; and after inviting our citizens, in a time of peace, to furnish their army and navy with provisions (then in danger of starving) they have protested the bills of their commanders, under the impudent pretence of receiving no value (and which general Rochambeau has the spirit to call a direct lie) and now leave us to seek for payment, God knows when, or where, of a debt thus incurred, to the amount of not less than eight or ten millions of dols. Such conduct is the most shameful robbery that can well be imagined, and would justify our government in withholding the payment for the purchase of Louisiana, or of committing any act of retaliation to offend the great consul to do us justice. Let it be remembered that this is the act of the government itself, and admits of no palliation. If the holders of these bills are attentive to their own interest, they ought to come forward in a body, and make such a representation as congress cannot, and will not refuse to interfere in their behalf. Yet a subject so injurious to our citizens, so disgraceful to public faith, is passed in silence by our patriotic printers, while if a sailor happens to be pressed by a British ship of war (tho' nine times in ten he will prove to be an Irish or Englishman) the democratic outcry commences at Philadelphia, & is re-echoed all over the continent, abusing the tyranny, as they term it, and the power of the British navy.

The good sense of all native Americans will, I hope, lead them to consider this subject with temper, moderation and impartiality: We ought to be no partizans, in the present controversy between France and England; but seriously and firmly support the conduct that prudence dictates. We have specimens of the national faith and justice of both countries—the British may in some cases, and no doubt do abuse the power they have at sea, and it is not in the power of their government to prevent it—but I believe it will not be denied that the French do not less abuse the power they have on land; the government of the former has, and it is fair to presume will again make reparation, where injury is committed by their officers in the most distant parts of the world—The latter without blushing, openly violate their engagements, rob our merchants, and treat us with marked contempt. It is impossible to establish a balance of power at sea. The trident must be wielded by some power or other; if it is taken from the British, it will necessary fall into the hands of the French; and America, as well as the neutral powers of Europe, would do well to consider, before it be too late, whether it is probable from the specimens the first consul has already given, that he will wield it with more justice and moderation than is now exercised by the British government.

MENTOR.

SEVEN RULES OF HEALTH.

From the Latin of Frederick Hoffman, a German Physician, who died in 1742, aged 82; with a learned comment, addressed to Mrs. P. B. and adopted to her particular situation and humor.

BY SHE KNOWS WHOM.

1st RULE. Avoid all excesses, because it is against nature.—COMMENT. You must not eat, drink, sleep or exercise, too much: and not only so, but no object either of passion or taste should carry you beyond what you strength and spirits are proportioned to bear. These are excesses, which always weaken, and, if continued, are sure to destroy.

2d RULE. Do not depart suddenly from what you have been accustomed to, because custom is second nature.—COMMENT. For instance, you, Mrs. P. B. have long been accustomed to contradict, to lecture, to rate your very good friend and humble servant; sometimes with, but oftner without reason. No matter: the evacuation has done you good: I have seen you grow better upon it; it will therefore be for your health not to—leave it off suddenly, but by degrees.

3d. RULE. Be cheerful and tranquil, because this is the surest means of health and long life.—COMMENT. To be cheerful—Don't look upon the dark side of the thing: don't extract only the melancholy, which will ever be one ingredient in all human affairs; don't forbode evils that never may happen, and be prepared to bare with reasonable patience those which assuredly will. To be tranquil—Suffer none of your passions to grow inordinate; let not your heart be torn with anger, envy and malice, &c. be not corroded with little splenetic frettings and vexations: nay, keep even the kind and amiable affections within due restraint; for these, by being suffered to indulge and riot at large, will acquire a violence, an impetuosity, and unrulines, which may serve for the ground work of much future tribulation.

4th RULE. Affect a pure and temperate air. COMMENT. I would add, and as often as you can, change your air; a change of air, even for the worse, has been found to produce goods effects upon invalids: to say nothing of the exercise, and benefits therefrom.

5th RULE. Adapt your aliments to your temperament, and let them be such as dissolve and pass easily. COMMENT. This must be ascertained by observation and experience of your own; books and physicians can do nothing here.

6th RULE. Observe a proportion between your aliments and your exercise.—COMMENT. I would rather say, proportion your exercise to your strength and spirits, and your aliments to the appetite this exercise shall give you: and (let me add) have a special regard to the temperature of the air, at the time of your using it; for I am by no means with those who think, that exercise in all kinds of weather is equally salubrious.

7th RULE. Avoid physic and physicians if you would be well. COMMENT. Does not this sound as if one was to say, "Avoid religion and priests, if you are desirous to be saved?" But whatever may be said for physic and physicians, you, I apprehend have no occasion for either. You complain of bowels as I do of nerves; but I do verily believe, that your bowels are sound and healthy. From some cause

But you must not use purging physic, because that, as it does some violence to all nature's, and would a great deal to yours, will infallibly weaken you, who are too weak already; and you must not be costive. POSTSCRIPT.

Your bilious ailment, if you mean any thing more by it than a propensity now & then to be cross and peevish, especially with you know whom, is another affair. This propensity which you call bilious, is mistaken by some for a sourness in the stomach: an acrimonious humor undoubtedly it is.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9.

The trial of Mr. Croswell, Editor of the Balance, one of the best papers in the Union, is a matter of astonishment, all things considered; and becomes, more and more, a subject of the day.

This is not extraordinary, for the Judge who presided, was, on one point of law only, no less than four times astonished.

He was astonished at the application to put off the trial.

He was astonished about a witness whom the defendant offered to call in his behalf.

He was astonished at the reasons given for putting off the trial, and finally,

He was astonished that the application should be made at all.

These astonishments induced his honour to peremptorily refuse indulgence to the defendant—adding, "even if the witness, to prove the truth of the publication, was in court, I would not suffer him to be examined on the point."

After this we trust the Democrats will desist a little from their scurrilous abuse of Judge Chase. The astonished Judge Lewis, may surely sit a while for him upon their filthy columns. But hold, say they—he is one of us—is he he so? Then the case is altered, and we are not astonished at all.

When Juvenis came forward to expose illiberality, he should not appeared with "unwashed hands."

He begins with recommending us to read Pope's Essay on Criticism. We had already done so—nay, we have seen the Dunciad.

Let us, however, look into the merit of his reproof, and see whether his lines are clear of the filth he complains of in ours. On this we "dogmatically say," that a production so fraught with invective—so foul in manners—and withal, so unlike the gentle delicacy "he charges us with lacking," has not often "tinged a fair sheet, or clapt the night mare on a groaning press."

But so it is—called upon we are to answer for unsavory words and want of skill; and mark the mode adopted. He charges us with a want of good breeding in such gentle strains as these—"palpable illiberality—misrepresentation—unmerited sarcasm—bitterness of 'satyric gall'—dogmatical stupidity—arrogance and brutality—censorious impudence"—and other neat turned epithets of a similar nature.

It reminds us of Falstaff's attack on the Prince, where the author has drawn his hero breathless with rapidity of abuse. To a child it might prove a lugubrious lullaby—to us it raises no other idea than bringing to recollection a certain old adage about a "pot and kettle"—the readers will guess at the allusion; and when they compare the language of "the Theatre" with the attack of Juvenis, they will draw their own inference: for we shall trifle with them no longer, on such a theme as this.

Policies are opened at Lloyd's Coffee House, London, for one guinea to return an hundred, if Bonaparte is alive 1 month after his arrival in England! The chance was thought far greater—many private persons offering the same bet upon a week!!!

The French are greatly distressed for money, the very sinews of war—without which the sons of equality, it seems, refuse to join their Corsican Chief in his aquatic excursion to Britain. He must, on this score, at any rate, be hard pushed—for he has offered an enormous premium for the discount of the purchase money, which is to be paid for Louisiana.

Information to those who trade with the Mississippi Territory.

By a law of the assembly of this state protested bills, drawn on any person within the jurisdiction of the U. S. but beyond that Territory bear damages of 15 per cent. If on any person within the territory, 10 per cent, and foreign bills 20 per cent. The law took effect on the 4th March 1803.

Extract of a letter from Savannah, Georgia, dated 23d Aug. 1803.

"This day at 12 o'clock a duel was fought by Samuel Howard and Joseph Welcher, Esqs. The subject of dispute arose in the City Council, of which they were both members. Howard was dangerously wounded by being shot though the belly. He fell on the spot and was supposed to be dead, he has been brought to town, his wounds examined and it is expected will recover. George D. Sweet was Howard's and George M. Thromp, Welcher's second The place of action was the Jews Burying Ground, where our friend Hunter gloriously but unfortunately fell. Alas poor fellow, cold is the grave in which he lies and green the turf that cover him.

AN OLD ANECDOTE.

Applicable to the present times.

In the reign of Francis the first, of France, there was a mighty talk of an invasion of Britain. The King summoned his chiefs in council to debate upon the mode of effecting this great enterprize. Various was the plans proposed, at length one was adopted. Almonel, the King's fool, who lye hid in a corner, started up, saying, "you may get there, master, but how are you to get back again."

For Sale, by
ROBERT & JOHN GRAY,
WHEATON's
GENUINE PATENT JAUNDICE
BITTERS,

A MEDICINE extremely useful when Jaundicy and Billious Complaints are so prevalent among the citizens of America and the West Indies.—They are a useful and efficacious Medicine for curing Jaundicy and Billious disorders, and removing that sinking, faint, distressed feeling at the stomach, difficulty of breathing, loss of appetite, and sleepy, dull heaviness in the forepart of the day, weakness and trembling of the limbs, dizziness of the head, and yellowness of countenance, complaints so common to jaundicy and billious people.

Also removing constipation of the bowels, obstructions of urine, cholicy complaints, pukings and purgings, indigestion, sick head ache, rheumatic complaints, &c. (which arise from a collection of sour, billious matter in the stomach) and at length restoring the constitution to strength and vigor.

They are also found very useful to carry off worms, and cure ricketty children, and may be used with safety in all constitutions, ages and sexes.

The many cures that have been effected in New England, by the above medicine, (as may be seen in the bills) prevent the necessity of further recommendation.

LIKEWISE,

Wheaton's Patent Itch Ointment.

The only medicine in the world which will certainly cure the ITCH, without having in it any thing either dangerous or disagreeable; it being composed mostly of ingredients never before discovered or used in that disorder. One box cures a person, and there need be no washing after the use of it, as the skin is generally left cleaner and smoother after the use of it than before.

A VALUABLE MILL FOR SALE.

THE subscriber wishes to sell his MILL, known by the name of Clifton Mill, within two and an half miles of Dumfries, on the waters of Quantico, which is as constant a stream as any in this part of the country, and in an exceeding healthy situation; very conveniently situated to a fine wheat country, not being more than half a mile out of the way, in going to Dumfries, from the main road leading from Fauquier Court-House, Centerville &c. (and by some thought not any out of the way at all) and a very good road to it. There are, if the purchaser chooses, 227¼ acres of land which may go with mill, (except one acre which will be reserved) or a smaller quantity as may be agreed on. The mill is an over-shot, with a wheel of 20 feet 9 inches and 4 feet head, with two pair of Stones. One pair of French burrs of 5 feet, the other of Cologne, with every apparatus necessary for carrying on merchant business to the best advantage. The mill house is fifty feet long and twenty seven feet wide, two stories high, with a small kiln for drying corn, together with barn, stable, cow house and lumber house, convenient to the mill. A convenient dwelling house, (not quite finished) with a kitchen, meat and corn house; the whole of which have been built within 7 years past. There are two very thriving young orchards of peach and other fruit trees. It was supposed, had not the frost killed the fruit this spring, upwards of 100 gallons of barndy might have been made from them. Should the whole of the land be required with the mill, there is another small house, kitchen and meat house, at a short distance from the former.

The situation of this property must render it a desirable acquisition to any person inclined to engage in this line of business, particularly so as it is situated so near tide water. It is deemed unnecessary to say any thing more respecting the premises, as it is presumed any person inclined to purchase would wish to see them. Nothing would induce me to part with this valuable property, but the pressing demands against me which I am anxious to discharge, therefore a great bargain may be expected. Any further information may be known on application to,

JOHN SOWDEN, Clifon Mill.
